

New England's Peak Dining Experience

STOWE, Vt. - Aug. 1, 2017 - Vermont is New England's most celebrated location for farm fresh meats, cheeses, produce, heirloom grains and local craftsmanship. Never before during the resort's 75-year history has the level of food service ever been better in Stowe. Several new mountainside restaurants, the new Great Room at Spruce Camp, the classic Cliff House and a resort-wide attention to quality make Stowe Mountain Resort a foodie's dream ski or golf vacation come true. Here's a brief description of what Stowe offers. To view menus and hours of operation please visit <http://www.stowe.com/activities/dining/>.

The Great Room at Spruce Camp

The Great Room is located at Stowe's new Spruce Camp base lodge. The grand dining room features dramatic alpine-cathedral style detailing with four exhibition cooking stations and produces made-from-scratch breakfast, lunch and après-ski fare. Local and regional influences drive this high-quality bistro/grill environment. An inviting bar and lounge offers cappuccino and espresso, local beer, signature drinks and entertainment in front of a luxurious fireplace.

The Cliff House

The Cliff House Restaurant, established in 1968, is distinctively situated 3,625' feet atop Mt. Mansfield, Vermont's tallest peak. The Cliff House serves the freshest seasonal fare resulting in an 'ultra-country' and local menu style. Renovations to the Cliff House include a beautiful and rustic interior, with high ceilings and expansive windows offering spectacular mountaintop views. The winter 2012 Summit Series dinners are scheduled to take place early-January through mid-March and reservations are required.

More Slopeside and Mountaintop Eateries

Include; The Mansfield Café and Den, located in the Mansfield base lodge, offer a full server and grill with adjacent bar featuring live music on weekends and holidays. The Octagon Café, located at the top of the FourRunner Quad and, Midway Café, located in Midway base lodge, and Solstice in Stowe Mountain Lodge.

Local Food Partnerships

Stowe Mountain Resort has partnered with the Vermont Fresh Network and Chefs Collaborative. These two non-profit organizations connect the resort's restaurants with local farmers to create exceptional dining experiences that are unique to the area.
