Park City Mountain Announces Opening on Thanksgiving Day for 2017-18 Season

PARK CITY, Utah. — Nov. 14, 2017 — Park City Mountain announced today that it will open on Thanksgiving Day, Thursday, Nov. 23, for the 2017-18 winter season.

“Park City Mountain is dedicated to providing our guests the best early-season ski and ride experience,” said Park City Mountain’s chief operating officer, Bill Rock. “We’ve seen several strong nights of early-season snowmaking and with a favorable weather forecast over the next 10 days, our expert snowmaking team is ready to make snow at every opportunity that weather permits. We look forward to providing our guests with a great opening day ski and ride experience in time for Thanksgiving.”

Last year’s season demonstrated that early-season conditions are not indicative of season-long snow conditions. After opening on Nov. 26 last season, Park City Mountain recorded 455 inches of snow at the Jupiter snow stake, 100 inches over the 355 inch seasonal average.
